

3

DRILL DESCRIPTION

Two teams (e.g. 4v4) line up in a playing area that has a six-metre-wide zone at each end and into which defenders are not allowed to enter. The team in possession scores a 'goal' if it gets the ball to one of its players in that zone (attackers may enter the zone only to receive the ball).

4

DRILL DESCRIPTION

Two teams line up using the entire court, on which cones are used to mark out 'goals'. There must be more 'goals' than players on one team. A team scores if one of its players successfully passes to another through one of the 'goals'.

1.4.3.4 Running with the ball: the basis of dribbling

Being able to run with the ball freely is a crucial part of effective dribbling. According to the coaching manuals, dribbling involves running with the ball with the aim of getting past or beating an opponent.

Running with the ball is one of the first core technical concepts that children are taught when they take up the game.

Tips for running with the ball

The player must use light touches to ensure they keep the ball as close to their feet as possible.

Ball control is more important than speed.

The player should run with short, quick steps.

Keeping the head up while dribbling is vitally important to the subsequent development of an attacking move.

Drills and game-situation exercises for developing dribbling skills

5

DRILL DESCRIPTION

Each player should dribble the ball around the edge of the court. Upon the coach's signal, they should enter the court and dribble freely, changing direction and pace. They return to the edge of the court upon the coach's next signal.

6

DRILL DESCRIPTION

Two players (one forward and one defender) sprint from the goal line towards a cone near the halfway line. The forward is given a head-start of around one metre. Once the forward reaches the cone, they take the ball and run towards goal, with the defender in pursuit trying to recover the ball.

7

DRILL DESCRIPTION

Two teams line up using the entire court, on which cones are used to mark out 'goals'. There must be more 'goals' than players in a team. A team scores if they take the ball through one of the 'goals'.